

March 2021

Foreword from District Commander Chief Inspector Marcus Cator

Welcome to the March edition of the Policing Eastleigh partnership newsletter

Hello everyone,

I trust that through the challenges of Covid and the lockdown, you have been able to remain strong, have not suffered from the impact, and that you have been able to find support, if needed, around mental health.

The future is starting to look bright!

This newsletter continues to ensure updates are provided to you regarding the local policing in your community.

In previous issues, we have covered the work of our district neighbourhood policing teams, our emergency response and patrol teams and that of our investigation officers. In this newsletter there will be a focus on the road policing team. With a fresh perspective of the work these teams cover, I hope you have seen how important the different teams are for our communities.

I hope that through this insight into the police work within your communities, you can be reassured that there are considerably more resources supporting the local community than just those police personnel seen walking the street. Our visible presence is vital, but this can only be achieved with the support of all of these teams completing their roles and tackling the issues that cause the most harm.

Over the past eight months we have increased the number of officers in our teams. We have rotated some of our leaders, and we have engaged with our partners and communities to thoroughly understand the issues facing us all. What has become evident through our positive policing action, is that drugs in our community is of concern. In February 2021, we completed two weeks of action to enable a full understanding of these issues and tackle individuals who perceive the use and dealing of illegal drugs as acceptable. I am sure that if you have followed our Facebook pages you will have seen the highlights.

Working with Eastleigh Borough Council, we have brought a fresh focus to the issues of drug related harm and violence through 'Op Fortress'. This Hampshire Constabulary model of partnership working, enables us to understand the issues of those who suffer from complex addictions. Partners reach out, engage and help safeguard vulnerable individuals against the effects and impact of involvement with illegal drugs. Through this work the police deal with those identified as being involved in criminality. The focus disrupts those intent on this criminal lifestyle. It also highlights adults and children who may be vulnerable to criminal exploitation.

The concerns of the community and partners regarding such issues are crucial. We continue to encourage the reporting of crime and disorder to police.

I am aware that on occasion a complainant may feel that the police do not respond and I have heard the comment 'What's the point? The police don't turn up!'

In order for us to take effective action we need members of our community to share useful information with us. The more people who report concerns to Hampshire Constabulary through 999, 101 and through our online portal via the Hampshire Constabulary website, the better we understand and can allocate appropriate resources.

Please encourage those you engage with and support, to continue to report ASB and Crime to the police. We will continue to support with our team patrols.

Chief Inspector Marcus Cator

Roads Policing in the community

Inspector Mark Foster explains the wider role and impact of our western roads policing team on the Eastleigh community

Hello – I am Inspector Mark Foster and I am responsible for roads policing in the South West of Hampshire, which incorporates Eastleigh and Hedge End. This includes all strategic roads such as the M27 and M3 motorways, which pass through the district.

The Roads Policing Unit has a requirement to police the strategic roads through pro-active patrolling and enforcement of road traffic legislation. This is to reduce road traffic collisions and casualties by educating users of the road network around the dangers of using mobile phones whilst driving, speeding, wearing of seatbelts and anti-social driving behaviours and enforcing these laws where necessary.

Roads policing officers are also responsible for investigating all life-threatening and fatal road traffic collisions on our roads and provide a full forensic crash investigation capability when necessary to ensure a full and professional investigation is conducted.

As frontline police officers, when not deployed to serious road traffic collisions, pro-active policing operations and pursuit management, officers provide frontline support to their neighbourhood and response and patrol colleagues by attending any grade 1 incidents (those deemed most serious / or urgent) within the district area. As such, it means that we are kept up-to-date with local community issues and crime trends to support local communities.

Currently there are 3 Sergeants and 28 Constables based out of Totton Police station, who provide the roads policing for the West of the county, supported when necessary by the Northern and South Eastern Roads Policing Unit bases at Whitchurch and Havant.
